IN THE FALL OF 2005 the first edition of Boston Common hit mailboxes all over town. Now, four years later, the magazine has become the city's go-to publication for living the luxurious life. We have our loyal readers and partners to thank for that.

Luxury, however, isn't all diamonds, shiny Maseratis and Veuve Clicquot (though we've enjoyed our fair share of all things sparkling this summer, especially with the opening of the new Ferrari/Maserati dealership on the Automile). It's also spending time with those who make a difference in our lives, people such as Khaled Hashem at Nantucket's White Elephant and Frank Neer, event mastermind behind the Nantucket and Tanglewood wine festivals. We had the pleasure of working with Michael Mooney, the general manager of the grand new Great Harbor Yacht Club, for the first time in July. He helped host our annual summer lawn party, along with the W Boston, the MGH Cancer Center and the gracious mojito makers at Bacardi. We saw quite a few of you at these events and at the soirée that officially kicked off Newport's sunniest season—the grand opening party for the Tower at Carnegie Abbey.

As we turn our attention to the months ahead, we're grateful for additional opportunities to eat, drink and be merry (OK, and enjoy a few more sparkly things). In just a few weeks we'll welcome Tiger Woods and 99 other elite golfers to town for the Deutsche Bank Championship (though watching them will remind us of the flaws in our own game). And we can't wait to step inside the city's most fashionable additions this fall—the W Boston and the Ames Hotel. Speaking of style, save October 3 for the Simon Fashion Now runway event at Burlington Mall.

In the nearer future, look for us at the Fidelity Investments Jumper Classic over Labor Day weekend. We'll be looking for you as we judge the hat contest! See you there.
